

NEW APPOINTMENTS TO MOBILARM BOARD

Release date: 15 July 2008

FOR GENERAL RELEASE

One of the world's leading innovators in marine safety technology, Mobilarm, has made two new board appointments to strengthen its presence in the commercial marine industry.

Christian Lange joins as Non Executive Director bringing a wealth of experience from the offshore oil and gas industry. As Managing Director of the Perth based engineering group, Neptune Marine Services, he has overseen considerable growth through identification of new opportunities to develop the business globally, a skill he intends to put to good use with Mobilarm, commenting, "With my background in the oil and gas industry, I was drawn to Mobilarm as I recognised the vital role that the technology has to play in providing a safer working environment for offshore workers. I am confident that the strategy the company has in place to expand Mobilarm distribution around the world can build on this internationally recognised product brand".

Also appointed to the board as Non Executive Director, is Rick Parish, the founder of the Marine and Offshore Group and expert in safety training with experience in offshore and gas, maritime, military and emergency services. Rick has been responsible for all aspects of corporate strategy development for the M&O group. He is also acknowledged as a world leader in Pararescue training for the Australia, Pacific and Asia region, a competence that he originally developed with the Australian SAS and built upon during a 5 year period as training manager for the National Safety Council of Australia.

Rick commented, “I have been aware of Mobilarm and its product range for some time and was interested in how it could be adapted for the oil and gas industry. Now, with the development of the VIPRB product, Mobilarm is poised to revolutionise emergency communication and position indication technology. I am therefore extremely excited about this opportunity to be part of the management team which will take the company forward globally.”

On announcing the appointments, Lindsay Lyon CEO of Mobilarm stated, “These new appointments further strengthen our position in the commercial safety market and will help us to build on our position as a world leader in this life saving technology”.
